The self-acting incline showing passing loops and 2 turnouts for run-away wagons.

All the mine tubs were hauled by Main & tail rope haulage because the drifts in the mine were first up hill then downhill, then level, then uphill as far as the Winn Dyke, where the seam was faulted; it was thought it continued above, but it was below, and after that it was level for 2000 yards to the Belmont royalty boundary. A set or train of pit tubs was 24 in number sometimes 27 and 8 full tubs drew 8 empty tubs on the incline which was 1 in 4 and 1 in 8 towards the top. Each tub empty weighed 10cwt and carried 30 cwt of ironstone; some miners could get 36 cwt in a tub. Gauge of the railroad was 2' 6" and we used flat bottomed rails of 42lb. per yard on main roads and 36 or 28lbs on side road into the working area.

Weigh-house at Monument mine

I returned to Ayton mines on January 22nd 1918. In early 1920 we built a large brick engine house for 2 Robey & Co locomotive type steam boilers for a Bradley & Turton high speed vertical compound engine. All electric motors were by Metro Vick of Trafford Park, Manchester. In early 1921 we built two large brick hauling engine houses. A sub station was built at the bank bottom. An underground cable was laid by the North eastern Electric Power Company from Guisborough to Ayton Mines and Pease and Partners helped with the cost of this. We had a Johnson & Phillips transformer in our sub station taking current in at 1100 volts and transforming it down to 2750 volts. I was responsible for laying in the cable from the bank bottom up the footpath at the side of the incline. This cable was bitumen insulated and wire armoured. We then installed two Main & Tail haulages driven by 3 phase electric motors of 300 hp each but capable of 700hp for 5 seconds each, taking full line voltage of 2750 volts. We also installed a 50 hp motor and a Holden & Brooke centrifugal pump of 600 galls/min, also a transformer and cables and switchgear at 2750 volts transformed to 440 volts.

Commercial Mining	1909	Monument Mine	0aha00kc.jpg	0aha00kc.jpg	Bottom of the incline to Monument Mine, looking towards Ayton Station, work in progress erecting the staging.	William Alexander, Harry Pick, Ben Gash & Tom Fletcher came up from Upleatham Mines in June 1909 to et a small boiler and steam engine up the bank and then a pair of rope drums for the self-acting incline. The steam boiler was an old John Fowler steam plough boiler and engine. This was taken up from Ayton Station, up the old bridle road by a team of six horses with Thompson Johnson, coal dealer, in charge. The boiler and engine was erected and geared to two 6'0" diameter hauling drums and this was used to haul all the materials up the incline and also to haul the full wagons from the drifts, and was in use up to August 1914 when a much bigger steam boiler and engine was erected. I erected this engine and the hauling drums from April to August 1914. This engine had been used at upleatham mines - but had been used at Lingdale to sink a new shaft in 1910. The boiler came from Thorne Colliery and was a Robey & Co locomotive type. The first pump in Ayton mines was a 4hp Blackstone oil engine and a 3 ram pump of 56 galls/min. I put this in - in 1910. The next pump was a 21hp Blackstone oil engine and a Glynne cetrifugalpump of 210 galls/min. I put this in - in 1912.

This was destroyed by fire. In 1895 the monument was 'restored' by readers of the Northern Eastern Daily gazette, which indicates that the first had been replaced by a stone monument in the intervening years. This photo was taken just after the monument was restored. In 1958 the monument was struck by lightening. It was repaired by the Rural District Council.	Cook's Monument

Village_Dev	Streets	1890	High Street	0aha00l1.jpg	0aha00l1.jpg	View of High Street from Stone Bridge	The stakes of the saw-pit are seen across the road at the far side of the beck. The sacks on the cart drawn by the horse have 'Eastern' written on the side. Possibly Eastern's flour. There was a flour mill on the other side of the bridge owned by Eastern's. However they could be North Eastern Railway sacks. The cottages in the centre have been replaced by old peoples flats. The Congregational Church was converted in 1978 into a dwelling. The low cottage near the horse has been demolished, and the distant houses in the centre have made way for a road widening.

Village_Dev	Streets	1910	High Green	0aha00lt.jpg	0aha00lt.jpg	View down the High Street from High Green		The shop on the corner was Margaret Cleminson's baker and confectioners. It was bought for her, his sister, by Jeremiah Thistlethwaite. The notice reads 'Tea Rooms'. Later the shop was managed by William Henry Thistlethwaite who employed a Miss Thrush and a Miss partridge. The shop in the middle has been demolished and replaced by a modern house. The shop belonged to Moody followed by Tingle.
